THE DAILY CONSTITUTION

VOL. IX. ATLANTA, GA. FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 2, 1877. NO. 228

THE Gwinnett Herald says that Rev. David E. Butler, of Morgan county, has announced himself as an independent candidate for congress in the ninth district. As we have seen nothing of this announcement, and as the friends of Mr. Butler submitted his name to the Gainesville convention, we are lead to infer that there is some mistake about this matter.

MR. P. H. MELL, JR., has resigned his position as chemist and meteorologist of the state department of agriculture, and leaves to-day for north Georgia, where he proposes to turn his attention to mining. The meteorological observation will hereafter be taken by Col. B. J Redding, the clerk of the department.

THE filibustering in the house yesterday was a failure. Vermont was successfully counted and Wisconsin reached, which is the last state to which objection can be made. There seems to be little probability that any parliamentary tactics on the part of the irreconcilables can prevent the declaration of the frauds of the commission.

TOM SCOTT'S Texas Pacific railroad swindle is hanging heavily around the necks of some of the democrats in the house. Otherwise there would not have been such a difference of opinion as to the duty of ferry. Jobbery is a hard burthen to carry, even when it is lightest.

THE eloquence of the telegraphers has been wasted after all. Hayes assures ex-Governor R. E. Powers, of Mississippi, that he has not written a syllable, nor authorized any one to indicate what course he would pursue in the south in case of his inauguration. This is too bad.

IF our fraudulently elected president desires to have some fun, let him endeavor to sustain the Packard and Chamberlain governments. He will then be compelled to license every federal soldier as a special tax collector.

HAYES has in all probability read Donn Piatt's seditious article, and is preparing to be a martyr. Otherwise he wouldn't be so continuously fetching Lincoln's name into his silly little speeches.

THE radicals in the house last night concluded to help the democrats by counting out Sollace, but, after all, Ferry will have to trot to the front with that little Vermont return.

FERRY and his secretary played a very pretty little game with the Vermont return. The question is, will it win?

THE fraudulently elected president seems to keep clearly in his mind the fact that he may be called to return to his domestic roost in Ohio.

COL. JOHN H. CHRISTY, of the Athens Watchman, whose death was briefly alluded to a few days ago, was born in Tennessee on the 15th of June, 1820.

GRANT seems to be anxious to give the Nicholls boys a chance in Louisiana. A chance is all they want.

WE trust Col. Gobright will lose no time in putting Hayes in training for a series of Sunday interviews.

AND so Tomferry bulldozed the democratic return from Vermont. Who is paying Tom's wages?

GRANT'S tool, Babcock, has been made engineer of the fifth lighthouse district.

EVARTS thinks nothing can postpone the regular declaration of Hayes' election.

JOHN HANCOCK, of Texas, seems to know all about traitors. Has John been in training?

SAM BARD received one vote for state printer in the Florida legislature.

HAYES now relies more on divine Providence than he does on Bradley.

Famine in Corea—Chinese Warfare—Spain and the Celestials.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 1.—The steamship Gallic, from Hong Kong via Yokohoma, arrived yesterday.

The famine in Corea continues, and appeals have been made to Japan for assistance.

The Chinese authorities are reported to have recently gained victories over the troops of Yakoof Bey, in Gabi, but the reports are not authentic.

The Spanish minister at Pekin has broken off relations with the Chinese government. The dispute grows out of Cuba and the Coolie question.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 1.—A dispatch says that Iglesias leaves there Sunday for New Orleans, thence to Vera Cruz. He accepts the situation and returns to Mexico as a private citizen.

Another unsuccessful effort was made yesterday to float the steamer Amerique which is stranded off Seabright.

WILKESBARRE, March 1.—A dispatch says a telegram was received here yesterday afternoon from the managers of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre coal company, to their agents here ordering all idle mines in this vicinity to resume work at once. Special Dispatch to The Constitution.

GAINESVILLE, March

My latest telegram last night, hurriedly penned in the midst of the convention's liveliest episode, was meagre, as a matter of course. I hasten to supply the stuffing and spice the dish for the palate of the public.

PRANDIAL POINTS.

When the convention adjourned for dinner, the first point for discussion was the probable action of the committee on credentials upon the contesting delegations from Clarke county. The Rucker delegation was conceded to be quite as regular upon its prima facie showing as the Huggins delegation, and the only question before the "commission" was whether it would go behind the returns or not. There was a heated discussion in the committee, the Bell men inside and outside contending that the Rucker delegation should go in, while the Carlton and other anti-Bell folks hotly insisted that Huggins led the only regular delegation. They also held that Rucker et al. having signed the seventeen-tailed letter to Speer, urging him into his anomalous candidacy, and having refused in the meeting at which they were appointed as delegates, to adopt a resolution to abide the action of this convention, they were in rebellion against the organized democracy and should be debarred. The committee however, under the influence of the prevailing epidemic of compromise, and admitted both delegations, giving to each the right to cast one and one-half votes. This was a complete nullification of the Clarke county representation in the convention, a practical stab at Carlton and a probable gain to Bell. The report was satisfactory to neither of the contesting parties, and their agreement to be dissatisfied was deemed to be the best evidence of the substantial justice of the decision.

COVERED THE CASE

There was very little excitement among the bulldozing elements, because of the determined stand of the delegates in favor of their men until the balloting should make changes necessary.

STAKING OUT THE FIELD.

The convention re-assembled at two o'clock.

Mr. Alexander's resolution to stick to the work until a nomination should be made was adopted.

A resolution by Eakes, of Forsyth, that the democratic party of the ninth district will abide by the action of this convention, was adopted.

Also, a resolution by the same gentleman, fixing the basis of representation the same as in the Ben Hill convention.

The two-thirds rule was adopted without dissent.

The chair announced that nominations were now in order.

WHO WERE TROTTED OUT.

Colonel N. L. Hutchins, of Gwinnett placed in nomination before the convention, Hon. Henry H. Carlton of Clarke.

Mr. Alexander, of Banks, offered the name of Hon. Hiram P. Bell, of Forsyth.

Dr. West, of Habersham, put in the name of Hon. David E. Butler, of Morgan.

Dr. Bradley, of Hall, placed before the convention the name of Hon. Jasper N. Dorsey, of Hall.

Prof. Glenn, of Jackson, tendered the name of the Hon. Joel A. Billups, of Morgan.

THE FIRST BALLOT

was anxiously awaited and was taken in complete silence as to the spectators and listening delegates, for upon it caucusing and filibustering must be organized. The vote stood as follows:

FOR CARLTON—Clarke 1½; Gwinnett 4; Habersham 1; Jackson 3, Oconee 3; Union 2. Total 14½.

FOR BELL—Banks 2; Clarke 1½. Dawson 3; Fannin 3; Franklin 3; Forsyth 3; Gilmer 3; Pickens 3; Rabun 3; Towns 3. Total 27½.

FOR BILLUPS—Banks 1; Gwinnett 1; Jackson 2; Madison 3; Morgan 3. Total 10.

FOR DORSEY—Hall 3; Lumpkin 3; White 3. Total 9.

FOR BUTLER—Habersham 2; Union 1. Total 3. Necessary to a choice 43 votes.

THEN THERE WAS A BUZZ

from all parts of the house, and the wire-pullers began to shift and shuffle, as they pulled here and pulled there. The Rucker crowd from Clarke had gone in for Bell and gave confirmation by the act to the rumors previously circulated concerning their action, if let in. Eakes was found to hold the proxies of the bunch of counties above Forsyth and to be voting them solid for Bell. The old badger from Pickens, Hon. Lem. Allread was found to be under the arm of the Bell bulldozers and to be holding the proxies of his county on pain of not defeating Bell by their use.

THE BALL-TOSSING WENT ON, with very immaterial changes. Butler dropped out after the fourth ballot. Adjournments were moved without avail, but sporadic recesses of ten and twenty minutes were taken at the end of every four or five rounds. Gwinnett began to vote five votes for Carlton on the fourth ballot and kept up very regularly upon that line to the close. Jackson occasionally gave him five and Oconee never flickered from him, except it was to make a fishing dip somewhere. Clarke voted solid for Carlton semi-occasionally.

At the end of the 26th ballot the convention adjourned to 7 p. m., the various candidates having received their highest votes, as follows:

Carleton, 21st ballot	28
Bell, 7th ballot	32½
Billups, 18th ballot	20½
Dorsey, 18th ballot	14
Butler, 4th ballot	6

When the adjournment took place it looked as though it would be impossible to nominate from the list then being voted for, and, it was whispered around that after supper the long horse would be introduced into the ring and successfully perform his menage act.

THE CANDLE-LIGHT CONTEST.

During the hour and a half allowed for supper there was a deal of caucussing done. The Bell men were as firm as fresh country butter, and as butters far more aggressive than spring-fevered Billy-goats. They admitted of no compromise, listened to no suggestion of change, and vowed and vummed that it should be

"BELL OR H—L!"

The Carlton men were as leal and true as the followers of Rhoderick Dhu and in the midst of the turmoil labored like men to plume the helmet of their valiant champion with the feather of nomination. The friends of the weaker and "tied out" candidates were standing in the line of compromise and wanted the cards bunched and a new deal made. This proposition met with little encouragement among the friends of the three men who were clearly in the race. It was evident that the nomination lay between Carlton, Billups and Bell, and, as between the leaders, Billups could easily have named the man at any moment from the opening of the fight.

THE GRAND TOUR-DE-FORCE

began when the convention met at 7 o'clock.

The 27th ballot was taken showing Bell 27½ instead of 28 on the ballot before adjournment, Carlton 19½ instead of 24, Billups 12 instead of 9, and Dorsey 5 instead of 3.

At this juncture there occurred more whispering, more cussing, more trading, and in five minutes it became apparent that a coup-de-grace was to be attempted upon the part of some of the floating delegates.

Dr Bradley, of Hall, arose and said that he would withdraw the name of the Hon. Jasper N Dorsey, "for the present."

A delegate from White county, who had been tipped the wink, then arose and said he would place in nomination before the convention the name of the of Hall, whereupon a goodly company of Gainesville schoolboys, who had been permitted to attend the convention as a sort of political corollary to their progressing education, shouted themselves hoarse. But Candler had been tied out too long and too far away. When he came before the convention in this way the delegates seemed to discover flakes of sycamore bark and slippery-elm shreds about his teeth and beard, showing how impatiently he had gnawed trees within tether length while waiting. The consequence was a foregone fact. Upon the 28th ballot, Bell had 18, Carlton 17½, Billups 9 and Candler 19½—quite complimentary, but tell-tale! The balloting went on and he fell behind never to recuperate until the 37th ballot, when he reached 20, and then on the 43d he touched 2½: and higher he never went.

On the 45th ballot, Hon. D. E. Butler reached 18 votes and upon that figure pirouetted to the rear.

The voting went on with varying results, but no one of the candidates reached a higher vote than I have already stated, until the 56th ballot, when Bell suddenly jumped from 20½ to 32, caused by changes from Banks, Pickens, Towns, and Union counties.

FORCING THE CENTER.

After the above ballot an effort was made for adjournment (as had been previously attempted several times) until Thursday morning at nine o'clock.

Captain Vaughn, of Gwinnett, opposed the motion and deliberately told the delegates that if the motion was pressed, he would move an adjournment sine die. He believed that unless a nomination was made at once, the convention would dissolve itself and the result be complete disaster to the democratic cause.

The motion was voted down.

There was more caucussing and wire pulling indulged in, and Rucker, of Clarke, announced to me, in confidence and in substance, that was at hand and that in twenty minutes Bell would be the nominee. The information was prophetic.

Billups and Candler were both withdrawn from the field. An old gentleman from Lumpkin, however, advised the convention that he placed in the pool the name of Col Weir Boyd, and that if nominated Col. W. B. would sweep the district like a prairie fire. Owing to the high premiums on insurance now prevailing the delegates balked at the suggestion, and Col. W. B. only mustered six votes from Lumpkin and White.

The real solid work now began and resulted as follows:

57th ballot—Bell 35½, Carlton 22½, Boyd 6.

58th ballot—Bell 32½, Carlton, 25½, Boyd 6.

Here came in the heaviest bulldozing of the day. Rucker was like a hot shot in a shovel and flitted from gray grandsire to beardless boy in a tumult of excitement. He worked the Bell wires until they were hot enough to blister. Thomas, of Clarke, sat at the table, cool, contemptuous and calculating; watching every motion and quivering like a passionate pale-red jelly at every spurt made by Carlton. He it was who said, when Rucker announced his delegation as intending to support the nominee of the convention, that Rucker had "gone too far for him!" He is a brother-in-law of Emony Speer And in this convention seemed ill at ease as Mephisto in a garden of the elect! The Billups men leaned to Bell, and the Carlton men had all they could do to hold the "originals" to the rack.

BELL TO THE FRONT.

The 59th ballot was taken slowly and amid the greatest anxiety. It was:

FOR BELL—Banks 3; Clarke 1½; Dawson 3; Fannin 3; Franklin 3; Forsyth 3; Gilmer 3; Habersham 2; Hall 2; Jackson 4; Madison 3; Pickins 3; Rabun 3, Towns 3; Union 3; White 3. Total 45½.

FOR CARLTON—Clarke 1½; Gwinnett 5; Hall 1, Habersham 1; Jackson 1; Morgan, 3; Oconee 3. Total 15½

FOR BOYD—Lumpkin 3.

A loud huzza of victory filled the house when it was clearly seen that Bell was nominated. His friends were effervescent with glee.

On motion the nomination of Hon. H. P. Bell was made unanimous.

A committee, with Tinney Rucker as chairman, was appointed to notify Colonel Bell of his nomination.

Mr. Eakes, for Colonel Bell and himself thanked the convention for the nomination and stated that Colonel Bell would move the ball right along rapidly up to the hour of election

Thereupon the convention at 11:39 p. m. was adjourned sine die.

TURNBULL AND RUCKER.

After the 53d ballot, Hon. Jim Turnbull, of Banks, got upon the floor as a proxy from Oconee county, and after the 53d ballot, moved a committee of conference composed of two each from the support of each candidate. In supporting his motion he eloquently stated the position of the district, the crisis in the country, and strongly advocated a harmonious result, speedily reached, in this convention. He then discussed the independent Speer, and characterized him as an insidious enemy to the organized democracy. "And," said he, "this convention has been all day in the grasp of men who are aiding and abetting him. I will tell the gentleman from Clarke (Rucker) that I understand the case. He is the man who unfurled and flung to the breeze the banner of independent candidacy in this district. He signed at the head of the list the call upon Mr. Speer to become an independent candidate. If he did not, it is a forgery!"

RUCKER—Mr. Chairman, I desire to state here and now, that all statements intended to characterize me as an independent, or as being here in the interest of an independent candidate, are deliberate and malicious lies!

TURNBULL—(Lunging at Rucker, and getting a finger in his collar.) Do you mean to say that I lie?

Friends interferred and separated the belligerents.

HUNTING UP ARTILLERY.

Bailey Thomas put himself at Rucker's side and Rucker begged Thomas to slip a pistol into his (R.'s) pocket, vowing that he would be careful in using it. Thomas wisely refrained from shoving the aforesaid gun into the aforesaid pocket.

During this militia scrimmage there was great excitement, and yells of "fight" from the school-butter delegates in the rear of the house.

Rucker then took the floor upon a personal explanation, apologizing for his language but reiterating the statements he had made.

TURNBULL—Do you mean that for me?

RUCKER—I do.

TURNBULL—(Making for Rucker)—You have got that to take back, you lying puppy!

RUCKER—Yes; and I will make you swallow that outside this hall!

There was more bulldozing and passing of compliments, more impolite than delicate, but the sizzling sovereigns were kept apart, and dove-eyed peace again brooded over the placid scene.

The subsequent proceedings with regard to this matter are not known, but it is reported that Turnbull and Bailey Thomas adjusted it without recourse to bloody methods.

WASHINGTON, March 1.

This has been the most exciting day of the struggle. The obstructors in numbers, decreasing rather, but grow bitterer and more defiant. Nearly all of them were beaten for the next congress, and declare that if necessary they will consume all the time left to this session by resigning, one after another. One hour can be occupied with each resignation. The anti obstructionists claim, however, that that will prevent the consummation of the count. The fight of to-day has developed no plan or purpose except to delay the count by every sort of dilatory tactics.

DO NOT INCREASE

The obstructionists demanded roll call on every question, and then refused to vote during the call, that they might consume a half hour in having their votes recorded after the call was finished.

THE APPEAL

of Levy, of Louisiana, to the democrats to cease filibustering, that the recognition of Nicholls might not be stayed or endangered, had a marked effect.

DISPATCHES ARE POURING IN

from Carolina and Louisiana asking that the count be concluded at once. Of the telegrams received from the country at large, those from business men almost unanimously counsel acquiescence and peace, while the politicians generally favor agitation, and war if necessary. The merchants represent that business is absolutely paralyzed.

It is certain that Hampton and Nicholls will be recognized if the count is concluded.

CONGRESS.

THE HOUSE IN A WHIRL OF EXCITEMENT.

The President of the Senate Pockets the Vermont Returns, Whereupon the Filibusters Make an Onslaught—Some Political Secrets Laid Bare—Scheming, Wire-Pulling and Button-Holing—The Members Standing on their Desks—The House Votes to Reject Sollace—An All-Night Session.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Recess having expired at 10 o'clock the senate reassembled at that hour, but no legislative business could be transacted. Objections in the Vermont case having been disposed of last night, the senate awaited the action of the house on that matter.

THE HOUSE.

All bills recently passed by the senate, removing political disabilities, were passed.

A call of the house was moved for the purpose of delay.

The speaker counted the house and found a quorum.

Roll call was demanded to verify the speaker's count.

The speaker said further proceedings under the call of the house were in order under rules of the house, but not under the electoral law.

Mr. Walling disclaimed any reflection on the speaker.

The yeas and nays were taken on the motion for a call of the house resolution—yeas 68, nays 169.

This skirmish occupied one hour and a quarter. It was followed by a motion to reconsider.

Pending this, the speaker ordered prayers, and the legislative day of Thursday began.

After the journal was read, Poppleton claimed that a duplicate return from Vermont had been properly made to Ferry, and Vermont should go to the commission.

[Half a dozen roll calls under the proceedings in this direction. The 68 are determined to die game which it is thought they eventually must. No committees this morning. All interest centers in the house.]

There was intense excitement over the roll call to dispense with reading the full journal under suspension of the rules, which is allowable by a two-thirds vote. During the balance of the session, if the minority find themselves short of a third on the call, they will be helpless, unless they recruit or by strategy compel the house to suspend the rules continually on minor points.

On a motion to suspend the rules and to suspend the reading of the journal the vote was yeas 175, nays 85. Gen. Gibson, Col. Levy and Captain Ellis, of the Louisiana delegation voted yea.

This call is preliminary to Poppleton's motion regarding the Vermont returns. The further count may be delayed several hours unless forced by resolution to proceed and be passed under a suspension of the rules.

[It has transpired that duplicate returns from Vermont were filed with the clerk of the court whose duty it was to forward it. The minority insist that the senate shall meet and open certificate from that state tendered now, or send for one, which by legitimate procedure should be in Ferry's box.]

Speaker Randall rules that Ferry in refusing to read but carrying away with him a duly authenticated paper affecting the election in Vermont, acted wrongfully, and it is competent for this house to demand the return of the paper. A resolution to this effect is pending.

The house seems perfectly uncontrollable. The minority demand the Vermont paper, and the speaker holds that a motion to suspend the rules is in order, and refuses to entertain appeals. All members are on their feet except those who are on their desks.

Randall has just said the chair is determined that gentlemen shall take seats. It will not submit longer to this disorder. [applause, but disorder continues. The mace officer has paraded over the house. The members have all seated themselves and the speaker has ordered visitors from the floor.]

Speaker Randall, after having the rules read, said the chair is resolute. The sergeant-at-arms will do his duty. [Cloak room lobbies and all approaches to the house are cleared.] The vote is now progressing on the motion to suspend the rules and proceed with the count.

A two hours' debate on Vermont has commenced, after which proceedings for the production of the missing paper from Vermont will be in order.

During the debate on Vermont Mr. Hewitt stated that he received a package addressed to Ferry in December with a letter stating that duplicates had been addressed to Ferry by mail. Hewitt had no doubt Ferry had had his mail copy until he denied it. Hewitt then tendered the package to Ferry, which Ferry refused to receive. Hewitt then, in joint session, handed it to Ferry. Afterwards Hewitt went to the clerk's desk with Senator Edmunds to see it. Ferry and his secretary regarded it as a personal paper and carried it away.

Mr. Garfield caused to be read a letter from Mr. Gorham, secretary of the senate, stating that he did, while in joint convention yesterday, put in his pocket the duplicate returns from Vermont, but upon being advised by the president of the senate that the house might construe that the senate had received it, he took the return from his pocket and laid it on the table in the presence of all the tellers.

When the debate was about half through a page from the senate came into the house with the returns. He took it to Mr. Hewitt, but that gentleman declined to receive it. The page declined to state where he got it, who sent him with it, to whom he was instructed to hand it, or anything connected with his custody of the paper.

During the debate Mr. Stone who was one of the tellers stated that he saw the secretary of the senate throw a package under the table among rubbish. Stone notified Hewitt subsequently that he saw the secretary take the package from under the table and put it in his pocket.

A resolution was then offered by J. Proctor Knott, that the duplicate return from Vermont should be opened by the president of the senate in the presence of the two houses, and if found to be a genuine certificate, that the same together with all the certificates shall be referred to the electoral commission; that if the senate refuse to meet in joint convention for that purpose, that the house notify it that it will not be ready to receive it until it does.

The yeas and nays were demanded, and the resolution was lost by yeas, 116; nays, 148.

Mr. Hopkins, of Pennsylvania, then introduced a resolution directing that the president of the senate open the certificate. It was in all respects the same as the resolution just voted down with the exception that the words that the house will not meet with the senate until it acquiesces therein, were omitted.

The yeas and nays were called—yeas 116, nays 148.

Mr. Lane moved to reconsider the vote.

After discussion the speaker ruled that the motion to reconsider was in order.

Mr. Hale moved to lay it on the table, upon which the yeas and nays were ordered.

An all night session is indicated.

In illustration of the character of the debate, Wilson, of Iowa, said: If the house intended to execute the law, it would be absolutely necessary to adopt a resolution cutting off all filibustering.

Walling replied: When fraud is law, filibustering is patriotism.

Hancock, of Texas—Traitors never practice patriotism.

The house is still in session. The fobbed Vermont returns are handed shrewdly by the irreconcilables. Nothing, nothing but their formal production by Mr. Ferry, which Mr. Ferry's friends think would be disgraceful, will satisfy them.

A vote finally reached that vote of Sollace should not be counted. The vote was 210 to 22, the republicans deeming it the best policy to vote for it.

There is no prospect of joint convention for some hours.

The house at last, 9:30 p. m., reached a vote on Poppleton's resolution as amended by Wood's substitute, that is that the vote of Sollace be not counted.

Mr. Walling endeavored to interpose a further delay in the shape of a request that he be excused from voting, which the speaker refused to entertain and an appeal from the ruling of the chair, which the speaker also refused to entertain, and so the roll-call proceeded, and it resulted yeas 205, nays 26, so the decision of the house was that Sollace's vote be not counted. Most of the republicans voted with the majority for purpose of the sooner bringing the question to a close

At 11 p. m. Vermont had been counted for Hayes, and objections were raised to Wisconsin.

At 11 o'block the contest was over in the house, the final vote taken and the senate notified. Then the senate came to the house and the votes of Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia were counted. Finally, the last state was reached, the state of Wisconsin, and objections are now being made to the certificate.

LATER—The senate, at 11:25, retired to its chamber, so that the houses might separately consider and determine the question.

STILL LATER—The house is endeavoring to get a recess.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Debt statement decrease during the month two million; coin in the treasury nine and a half million; currency, nine and one-eighth million.

The conference committee on postal affairs seems hopelessly apart on subsidies.

The Star says Ex-Governor R. E Powers of Mississippi, who has just arrived in this city, stopped on his way and held an interview with Gov. Hayes as to his probable southern policy. Gov. Hayes assured this gentleman that he has not written a syllable, nor authorized any one to indicate what course he would pursue in the south in the event of his inauguration further than was set forth by his letter of acceptance, and that all reports relating thereto are unauthorized so far as he is concerned.

Supreme court—Grange cases decided to-day adversely to railroad and right of state legislatures to regulate rates freight accorded.

The Tribune's Washington dispatch says that it is undoubtedly true now that Grant intends, as soon as Hayes is officially declared to be president elect, to modify the orders to General Auger, so as to require him no longer to maintain the status in quo in New Orleans and to use the United States troops stationed there only for the purpose of preventing bloodshed. This policy has been determined upon by the president in opposition to the advice of some members of his cabinet, but it is understood to have the approval of Governor Hayes' most intimate friends in this city.

The republicans are greatly divided in regard to this new Louisiana policy, had some of them have already been to the white house to protest against it.

The Star intimates that the president will not accept as conclusive any irregular count and proclamation by the senate. If the electoral law fails he will not allow Mr. Ferry's doubtful powers to the hazzard of a choice between Conkling and Morton, followed by a new election. The outlook is dreary. The low price of gold is shrewdly accounted for on the hypothesis that owing to the indepressed condition of trade no one will want it.

WORDS FROM THE APE'S MOUTH.

He made a brief speech.

After speaking of local affairs and old associations the governor proceeded:

As for myself and family, we go perhaps to return in a few days to occupy our accustomed place in this community; possibly we go to other scenes and other duties, not to meet you again. In that event I wish to say, as Mr. Lincoln said on parting with his friends at Springfield sixteen years ago, "I trust you will pray that I may have that divine assistance and guidance without which I cannot succeed, and with which I cannot fail."

The Hayes party consists of Mrs. Hayes, his sons, Webb C. Hayes and Scott Hayes, and his daughter Fannie.

Among the members of the party were General J. G. Mitchel and wife, Miss Platt, R. H. Platt and Frank Hickok, all of Columbus; General R. P. Buckland and wife and Dr. J. T. Webb, of Fremont; General R. P. Kennedy, of Belle Fontaine; T. G. Nickell, of Chillicothe; ex-Governor E F. Noyes, J. W. Herron and wife, Dr. J Davis and wife and L. C. Weir and and wife, all of Cincinnati. The train left on time.

BRADLEY'S PUPPET SPEAKS AGAIN.

NEWARK, O., March 1.—A halt in the train allowed Hayes to say:

My Fellow-citizens—I appear to say a few words in bidding good-bye to you. I understand very well the uncertainty of public affairs at Washington. I understand very well that possibly next week I may be with you again to resume my place in the governor's office. But I also understand that it is my duty to be at Washington, prepared to assume another position higher and more responsible, and with more difficult duties.

A LOOK AT THE BLOODY SHIRT.

I have thought, as I looked upon this great audience, and as to-day I gazed on the people who thronged our route to this depot, of similar occurrences sixteen years ago. A little less than sixteen years ago I marched down High street with a thousand men, to pass to the east and to the south to do what we could to restore the union of the states and re-establish the authority of the constitution. (Cheers.) In that work we were eminently successful, so far as it was possible to be successful by force of arms. I am not here to say one word in disparagement of what was accomplished by the brave men who went out with me from different parts of the country. Of my comrades, one-third and over never returned to their homes. They perished in the discharge of their duty that the republic might live, but there was something force could not do. We would have our union to be a union of hearts, and we would have our constitution obeyed, not merely because of force that compels obedience, but obeyed because the people love the principles of the constitution (long and continued applause), and to-day, if I am called to the work to which Abraham Lincoln was called sixteen years ago, it is under brighter skies and more favorable auspices. (Applause.) I do hope, I do fervently believe that by the aid of divine providence (!) we may do something in this day of peace, by works of peace, towards re-establishing in the hearts of our countrymen a real and hearty attachment to the constitution as it is and the union as it is.

THE CRINGING KNEE.

PITTSBURG, March 1.—The train carrying Governor Hayes and friends arrived here on time, and with every one delighted with the trip. The train was immediately transferred to the Pennsylvania Central and left promptly on time. The reception at all points has been enthusiastic to a point never before accorded to any public man in Ohio. Beside the places already mentioned in the despatches, large crowds were in waiting at Denison and Steubenville, and demanded not only to see but hear the president elect. There was no speaking, but plenty of handshaking and expressions of good will. At the latter place there was a brass band that discoursed patriotic airs and helped to divide the honors with the citizens.

The Other Perjurer.

WATERTOWN, March 1.— Wheeler will arrive in Washington to-morrow.

Gordon's Ambition.

LONDON, March 1.—The Times prints the following extract from a private letter from Colonel Gordon, dated Cairo, February 17th: His highness, the Khedive, has given me over the Soudan, in addition to the provinces of Equator and the Red Sea coast, absolute authority. It will be my fault if slavery does not cease, and if those vast countries are not open to the world. The whole secret of the matter is in the government of Soudan, and if the man who holds that is against slavery it must cease.

Animated Sales.

NEW YORK, March 1.—An auction firm sold to-day at their sale rooms 1,500 cases of Richmond prints. Large attendance, and bidding spirited and bringing what were said to be very good prices. Prints were disposed of at prices ranging from 6 3-4 to 7 1-8 cents per yard.

THE CLIMATE OF GEORGIA.

Correspondence of the Brooklyn Union-Argus.

COVINGTON, GA., Feb. 20.—For some years past Florida has been the great resort of invalids and those in search of pleasure, or those who desire to escape the rigors of our winter months and it has a climate so congenial that it is no wonder that it becomes a favorite resort. But from the experience we have had, and from all we could learn from those who have spent many seasons in that state, we are convinced that there are but two months that Florida is in any respect superior to middle and southern Georgia, and we have some doubts even if these months (December and January) are any better for any invalid going from any place north of Baltimore or Philadelphia. The change is too great; the noonday sun in Florida is too debilitating to a northern constitution; the sudden transition from the severe cold to a climate so mild is not often beneficial, and in some instances has proved very injurious.

Your correspondent has spent twenty years in Maine, twenty years in New York, and twenty years in middle Georgia, and besides he has spent two winters in Virginia and two in North Carolina, and he has made pretty extensive excursions in other states of our union, so he ought to be competent to write about the climate of Georgia as compared with other states.

We have in this portion of Georgia where we are now residing, one of the most delightful climates in the United States, equally free from the extremes of heat and cold; the winters are remarkably pleasant, with just enough cool and bracing atmosphere to make it agreeable. For four or five years, during our residence here, before the war, we saw no snow or ice, only a few frosty mornings during the winters; the greatest portion of the winter months are like the Indian summers in New England and New York. During some exceptional winters, like the present, we have a few inches of snow in December or January, but it remains on the ground but a few hours or days, and is succeeded by weeks of pleasant weather like summer.

There are some days during these two months that seem chilly and disagreeable, although the thermometer is far above 32 degrees, and there are no signs of ice; yet there is a dampness in the atmosphere, and the caloric is abstracted so rapidly from the body that one exposed to the weather may suffer considerably; but if such persons are clothed as they are at the north, it is only agreeable and exhilerating. There are so few days of cool weather in this climate that the houses are not constructed with reference to these exceptional days; they are open and airy, so that it really seems cooler than it is, especially to those northerners who spend their first winter here.

There is a range of territory or ridge extending from Macon to Atlanta (traversed by the Western and Atlantic railroad) that is remarkable for not having a bridge for 100 miles, for this ridge divides the waters of the Gulf of Mexico from those of the Atlantic. Near Griffin, on this railroad, only a few rods from either side, there are little streams that run into the gulf on the one side and into the Atlantic on the other. In this ridge and its sloping sides for an extent of forty or fifty miles, we have the most beautiful portions of Georgia, and the most congenial climate for invalids during all seasons of the year; it is free from the extreme heat which we find in the lower portions of the state, and the cold of the northern or mountainous sections. This section is not subject to the malarious diseases that are experienced in Savannah and the coast region; indeed so healthful is this portion of the state that the citizens of the coast are accustomed to seek these middle countries for their residence during the summer months.

Consumptives, and those afflicted with bronchial diseases here find a most congenial clime throughout the whole year. We have none of the debilitating influences which exist in Florida during the hot summer months, and, as we have said above, no severe cold that is so deadly to those who have weak lungs, and who need so much the outdoor exercise and the balmy air to breathe. There are but few days during the whole winter months but the invalid can be in the open air.

The few chilly damp days that we have experienced in December and January can be made quite endurable to the invalid if he will put on his comfortable northern overcoat and perhaps keep within doors for a very short period, for even during these two months we have a large propotion of bright and summer like days, that allow of out-door exercise with as much comfort as in May and June at the north.

Throughout this whole region there are shady drives and good roads for exercise, either on horseback or in carriage. The roads around the extensive plantations are picturesque and full of interest to the Yankee visitor, the negroes at work in the field, with their joyous faces shining with delight, their loud songs and their characteristic laugh, always ready for conversation and willing to communicate any information in their power; then the innumerable mocking birds that fill the woods with their song, and the clear, balmy air, so refreshing and invigorating to the invalid at this season; all these contribute by the contrast of the snow and ice at the north to make residence in middle Georgia to be delightful indeed.

In our next letter we will give your readers some characteristics of the negro character. L. M. C.

NEGRO TROUBLES.

They Resist a Sheriff in South Carolina.

CHARLESTON, March 1.—Some excitement was caused yesterday near the scene of the Combahee riots of last fall, a few miles below Charleston, by the news that a mob of 100 negroes had fired on a sheriff's posse sent to arrest a negro who had refused to submit to arrest on a warrant issued by a trial justice appointed by Governor Hampton, and that the posse had been forced to retreat. To day a posse of 200 men, black and white, were sent to disperse the rioters and arrest the ringleader. The rioters were found in force at Calf Pen, on the Savannah and Charleston railroad, but when charged by the posse fled without firing a shot. About twenty of them were captured with muskets in their hands and were sent to jail. No one was hurt on other side. The sheriff is still in pursuit of the rest of the rioters.

VANDERBILT'S WILL.

Its Probate to be Contested To-Day On Behalf of Eight Married Daughters.

New York World.

Ever since the will of the late Commodore Vanderbilt became known, there have been vague rumors of discontent and threats of lawsuits by the heirs of the testator. The disparity between the amounts left by the commodore to his various heirs gave color to these reports; later it was said that Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt, to whom the bulk of his father's property was left, had promised to recompense those whom the will neglected or attended to insufficiently; then that he had not promised but would nevertheless do so. Yesterday the matter took definite shape by the action of Mrs. D. B. Allen, one of the Commodore's daughters, who through her counsel, James Matthews and David Dudley Field, filed notice of her appearance to-day before the surrogate to contest the will.

The step is taken, it is said, with the approval and co-operation of all the commodore's children except W. H. Vanderbilt. One of the principal grounds of opposition to the will is that of the undue influence which was, it is claimed, exerted over the venerable commodore during the latter part of his life. The others who are expected to join with Mrs. Allen in this suit are the following married daughters of the late commodore: Mrs. Horace F. Clark and Mrs. Lafitte, who are at present in Europe, Mrs. Cross, Mrs. Torrance, Mrs. W. K. Thorne, Mrs. La Bau and Mrs. Osgood. It is understood that not any particular part but the whole will is objected to and will be contested strongly.

One of Mrs. Allen's friends and advisers said yesterday: "The contestants have no fear of the result in this matter, but they consider that Mr. William H. Vanderbilt is alone responsible for the contest. Every opportunity has been offered him for an amicable settlement, but, with the exception of a few unbusiness-like propositions, he has failed to make any response. He plants himself upon the conscientious standpoint of being forced to carry out his father's will, and ignores the heavy responsibility he assumes of forcing upon the public a private history which must have a serious effect upon that father's name." In reply to a request for fuller information on this latter point, the gentleman in question added simply that the contest will bring to light peculiarities of the commodore's life for twenty-five years before his death. It is understood that Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt, when informed of the contemplated contest over his father's will, said that if the parties would wait until the will should be proved he would "fix things all right with them," but when they asked some guarantee he declined to give it, and hence the proceedings in behalf of Mrs. Allen to set aside the will. Mr. Matthews, of Matthews, Husted & Foley, will appear to day for Mrs. Allen.

Trying it On.

New York Tribune.

Two Fifth avenue belles, as a practical test of the generosity of their friends dressed themselves in old clothes, and, as the shades of night were falling, went out upon the avenue and solicited alms of every gentleman they met. A shake of the head or a muttered remark that they were "busted" was all that was vouchsafed by the greater number of passers-by. Their masquerading lasted an hour, they met nearly all their acquaintances, they gained only ten cents, and though fair to see even in their poor attire, no Cophetua asked these maids to share his fortune. They then turned their attention to the houses on the avenue and their success furnished a striking commentary on the modern proverb that charity begins and ends at home. A crust of bread was all that could be spared from the tables of Dives. These damsels had much sport in getting beneath the crust of conventionality, and pronounced their experience superior even to private theatricals.

Gamblers Arrested.

BALTIMORE, March 1.—In the criminal court to-day, George Huntington, John Young, jr., Josuah Evans and Jas. Gamble, were indicted for keeping gambling houses and fined 350 dollars each and cost. Francis Dardine was fined $500 and cost, and R. J. Slata was sentenced to five months in prison. All parties plead guilty.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousand of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breath air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, and the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that parties surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, bilious remittants and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence, and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAR. 2, 1877.

THE FREMONT ORATION.

In another column will be found Governor Hayes' Fremont speech. It is as dignified and eloquent as one of Grant's best efforts. Grant's speeches are not models, but they are free of silliness and sentimental twaddle. We can not say as much of Burchard's effort at Fremont. But his numerous apologists who are looking for political plums, say that he was in the backwoods, and that he did not talk with the fear of newspaper men in his mind. The speech does not the less, however, show the calibre of the man who will probably never set the Potomac on fire.

The speech created no little amusement in congress when Mr. Poppleton, of Ohio, wished to have it printed in the Congressional Record as an illustration of the statesmanlike qualities of the new president. Its insipid and meaningless sentences created merriment among the democrats as the clerk read them out slowly and clearly. The republicans were silent and ashamed. Not a single one spoke while the silly stuff was being read. A few grimly grinned in sickly response to the good nature that displayed itself on the democratic side.

In the Ohio senate Mr. Andrews rose to a question of privilege. He read the speech, and then he solemnly said:

I have read this extract by the privilege of the senate, as a sample of the ability of the man who is to be the president of the United States for the next four years. I think there can be no doubt as to his competency.

The speech is now immortal, and the century's greatest boast will be that it produced two such orators as Grant and Hayes.

DELEGATES TO THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

It should be borne in mind by the people in voting for delegates that there are no restrictions upon the eligibility of members of the constitutional convention. Under the provisions of the bill authorising the assembling of a convention any qualified voter may be a delegate, and in this respect the measure is exceedingly wise. No person now holding office in Georgia is disqualified to serve as a delegate. The governor, the judges of the supreme and superior courts, members of the general assembly and all other officers are eligible, so that the voters of the state, provided a convention is carried, can select their very best and wisest men to represent them in a body whose delicate and responsible duty it will be to frame the organic law of the state. We trust and believe that the people will take advantage of this fact, and elect as their representatives in the convention the ablest and most experienced citizens.

IN THE MATTER OF RETRENCHMENT.

In our article yesterday, reviewing the results of the retrenchment inaugurated by the general assembly, at its recent session, we should have stated that the bill for funding the endorsed bonds of railroads will be in force for twelve years, making a saving to the State of about $300,000. The bill granting aid to the Marietta and North Georgia railroads, will be in force for four years, at an expense to the state of $60,000 while the Savannah drainage bill will be in force only one year at a cost of $35,000 to the state. We present these additional facts for the purpose of preventing any confusion—especially in respect to Mr. James's funding bill.

THE counting out of Mr. Tilden deprives the south of proper representation on the bench of the supreme court of the United States for many years to come. Fifteen states containing twelve millions of people are entirely unrepresented. It is probable that His Fraudulency will select at least a brevet southern man to fill Judge Davis' seat. If so, the new judge will doubtless be Judge Caldwell, at present United States circuit judge for Arkansas. He is recommended by prominent men of both parties. Judge C. is a Virginian by birth, and is much respected. He was appointed United States district judge for Arkansas by President Lincoln in 1864.

HIS FRAUDULENCY has one sincere admirer outside of the country post-offices, in the person of Mr. Eli Perkins, who thus describes the angelic being:

Some of Governor Hayes' peculiarities are these: Perfect mental tranquillity, perfect physical health, and a clear conscience. He is modest, courteous, absolutely temperate, sympathetic as a child, but, as firm as the rocks of Gibraltar when justice tells him the time has come to say yes or no. Religiously Governor Hayes is a Methodist, but unlike his pious wife, he is not a communicant. He believes in and attends regularly the Methodist church. He does not smoke, can't play cards, and never owned a fast horse; never was a member of a returning board, nor never lived in Brooklyn.

THE only just and impartial votes cast in the commission were those of the democratic members. In the Oregon case all of the democrats voted against Cronin's claims, and in the South Carolina case they voted to reject the votes of the democratic electors. Contrast these votes with those cast by the notorious eight, and imagine what history has in store for the latter.

GEN. PALMER, editor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, has been appointed postmaster of Chicago, in the place of McArthur. The latter stole $34,000 of the government funds, resigned and went into bankruptcy before he could be exposed. He was a model republican of the period. But it is a question whether a defaulter isn't preferable to a bloody-shirt waver of the Inter-Ocean stamp.

POPPLETON seems to be putting Ferry to some inconvenience in regard to the double returns from Vermont. Isn't there some law that prevents a common individual from fretting and vexing so pronounced a patriot as Ferry?

EVEN Speaker Randall is bold enough to say that Ferry has acted "wrongly," Ferry is a loyal man and ought to be protected.

HON. H. P. BELL IN THE NINTH DISTRICT.

The Gainesville convention unexpectedly, but determinedly brought its labors to a close late Wednesday night, by the nomination of a candidate to bear the standard of the true and organized democracy of the ninth district in the pending contest for congress in that district. The nominee is the Honorable Hiram P. Bell, of the county of Forsyth, one of the truest and sturdiest democrats in that valiant mountain constituency. He is well known in Georgia, having represented local constituencies in various trusts, was a member of the Confederate congress during the most desperate period of the lost republic's existence, and was three terms ago representative from this ninth district in the United States congress, making for himself a consistent and honorable record, proving his capacity for useful service and his reliability in a representative station.

The action of the recent convention clearly demonstrates the determination of the democracy of the ninth to stand firmly by the principles which now, in this dark crisis of our history, constitute the vitalizing element of our liberties. The nomination effected, after so many prophecies of failure and of disintegration, is a long stride beyond local prejudices and a clear elevation above the plane of political perfidy and iconoclasm. An issue, clear, distinct and inevitable, is thereby presented to the people of the district and it is the honorable and special duty of every true democrat in all that country to give point and effect to this canvass, and by zeal, energy and harmony establish democratic supremacy and stamp out disorganizing elements in that proud constituency. The time may be brief for the healing of wounds and the wheeling of the battalions, but still it is long enough for men who know and love their duty to honestly and faithfully perform it.

The contest will be short and sharp, and there is an insidious and ambitious foe in the field. Let it not be misunderstood in this emergency that "reform" is oftener a hollow sham than a real offering of value, and above all let it not be forgotten that reform from without, coming in a shape more likely to crush than to cure, is always a delusion and a Dead Sea apple to the lips that are tempted into touching it. Let it not be thought that the one great reform that constitutes the platform of the latest agitator in the ninth, viz: a reform of the basis of representation, is the thorough panacea that he pronounces it to be, for any system yet proposed for the object he has in view, calls for mutual concessions upon the part of the sections of the district now sought to be arrayed. Yet, for a suppositious advantage to one section, by arguments entirely sophistical, this champion of reform seeks to reform the party that he professes to love into a state of hopeless anarchy and irretrievable political poverty.

The true and faithful democrats of the ninth district should lay aside all feelings but those that point to success in this canvass, and shoulder to shoulder go forward with the work so well begun at the late convention. Their candidate is worthy of success, the cause is one to command it, and the constituency one that can achieve it. We harbor no doubt of the thorough materialization of the spirit of democracy in the district, in this election, and when the people of the ninth are only true to themselves, to their traditions and their hopes of the future they are certain to make victory their attendant captive.

Now to the brave work before you! The slogan should ring through every valley and fleet-footed malises bear the burning signal from crag to cliff upon either side of the Blue Ridge, summoning the lovers of good government, of liberty and free institutions to rapid and full enlistment, to the polls under the banner of true democracy, Bell and victory!

THE tenor of Hayes's speech in Columbus, Ohio, on Wednesday night, would lead the casual reader to infer that the fraudulently counted in president is not certain that he will take his seat.

IT must be a lovely sight to see the mace-bearer of the house parading around among the howling members, forming a grand and gloomy procession of one.

THEY have a mace bearer in the lower house of congress. The man who carried the clores has probably resigned on account of overwork and inadequate pay.

RETURNING BOARD HAYES is determined to be an office-holder to the last. Consequently he will cling to his governorship until he hears the owle's cry.

THE Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal says that "persons usually well posted" believe that Joshua Hill, of Georgia, is the coming postmaster-general.

THE master spirits of the fraudulent administration will be the shamless Edmunds and the sly foxy John Sherman. Can such reformers reform?

ACCORDING to the telegrams, there seems to be quite an uproar among the able members of the lower house of congress.

SENATOR GORDON presented last Tuesday the credentials of General John T. Morgan, Alabama's eloquent senator-elect.

THE house was yesterday cleared of all strangers. This movement was probably in the interests of the strangers themselves.

SIXTY-EIGHT members are quite sufficient, it seems, to give the house proceedings an interest that is quite unusual.

WORK is to be immediately resumed in all idle mines in the vicinity of Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THEY are talking about turning loose Wells and his fellow-knaves.

VERMONT is a vexed question in our politics.

HAYES has taken a solemn farewell of his neighbors!

HAYES is worrying himself considerably over what occurred sixteen years ago. He evidently believes that he is the only successor poor Mr. Lincoln ever had; but we are much mistaken in our estimate of the man if the rugged honesty and simplicity of Lincoln would not have revolted at the bare idea of going into the presidency through the methods of fraud and perjury.

BY a vote of 29 to 28 in the senate all further consideration of the bill to create a sinking fund for the liquidation of the indebtedness due the government by the Pacific railroad companies, was postponed until next December. We need scarcely say that Senators Norwood and Gordon voted in the negative.

THE facetious Barr announces that all the members of the house were on their feet at one time yesterday, except those who were on their desks. It is absolutely refreshing to have so humorous a joker at the other end of the telegraph line.

MILTON SAYLER's friends will make a lively fight to elevate that gentleman to the speakership; but the chances are decidedly in favor of Mr. Randall's reelection. The latter has made many friends since he was lifted above the noisy crowd on the floor.

IT seems that Hayes himself is rather dubious.

Two wealthy ladies of England have contributed enough money to clean out Jacob's well at Schechem. ABOUT six months ago a young man in Rock Island voluntarily escorted an old lady home from a church sociable. Last week she kindly died and left him $4,000. THE most that can be said of Hayes is that he is quite as good as the men who made him. KELLOGG is really a pitiable object here in these days. He goes about the streets dejected and downcast, with defeat inevitable and bankruptcy staring him in the face. He is absolutely without friend in either party; for since the president snubbed him so unmercifully, even his fellow carpet baggers, who are still in power, pass him by on the other side. He will be able to pay his hotel bills, but will probably have to walk home, if he had any home to walk to. His way is the way of the transgressor.—Washington Special to the Boston Post

SAMUEL WILLISTON, the first manufacturer of buttons in the United States, is still living, seventy years old, and worth six million dollars He has made half the buttons used in the world, and has never yet made a suspender button that would hold its grip and not fly off and rattle across the floor every time a man stooped to pick up his hat in church He was the first man who manufactured a tin button that looked enough like a silver five-cent piece to fool a short-sighted deacon with a contribution basket.

PHILADELPHIA EVENING CHRONICLE: Hayes cannot be inaugurated and his party live. The hour that declares him president will also sound the death knell of the organization that hopes to profit by the great fraud.

Then it will be that the democratic party, if in this hour of great trial it proves itself true to its plighted faith, will stand supreme. The support and confidence of all good men will be accorded it, and ere two years have passed the power that has been stolen from it by Bradley and his equally unscrupulous colleagues, will be returned an hundred fold.

THERE have been of late a great many suicides in the United States. Old bachelors and middle-aged crones, bridegrooms and brides, lovers accepted and lovers rejected, sweethearts, brothers and second cousins, school girls and mothers-in-law, have all taken refuge in bullet, rope, canal, or cold poison. Suicide, as carried on here, is a matter of individual enterprise—a retail trade. In England it is conducted on the co-operative basis, and has developed into a wholesale business. At Leeds, three weeks ago, an Irish girl died of typhus fever, and there was a well attended wake. Thirty guests joined in the festivities and in the course of a few days all of them were down with typhus. In London a wake over a small-pox patient was quite as successful —St. Louis Times.

DONN PIATT'S BLOODY KNIFE.

Governor Hayes Receives It—It is Taken from Donn's Pants—A very Silly Speech and a Shake-Hands all Around.

CINCINNATI, February 25.—A special dispatch from Fremont to the Gazette says Governor Hayes arrived there unexpectedly last evening, and an impromptu reception was given him. He was introduced by General Buckland, who said:

Friends, I have the pleasure of introducing our president-elect, as we believe.

Governor Hayes said:

Friends and neighbors: The manner in which I am introduced makes it rather easy for me to speak without much embarrassment, but we had better stick to the old title until we are sure of something new. In these times of uncertainty we are often disappointed. The good news of to-day is often dispelled by the bad news of to-morrow. During the few months since the 7th of November I have schooled myself so as not to be very much down nor very much up, but to try to keep as near the even line as possible. This kindly meeting this evening I do not take so much as honoring me as a congratulation upon the manner in which the strange and peculiar question is now being settled. No other country in the world could have endured such a struggle without suffering lasting calamities. In the event of remaining among you for the next two or three years, I will attend the next pioneer meeting, and bring a bundle of letters and notes, many of which I am constantly receiving, such as curiously drawn sketches of knives, daggers and revolvers.

But I have not lost much sleep from any of them yet. One of the most amusing was received this week. It was a knife about two feet long, one edge hacked like a saw, probably for sawing a bone; the other side for cutting the flesh. This was wrapped in several thicknesses of paper, and inside was a note, as follows:

"This is the knife which the editor of the Capital was to assassinate you with as you went from the white house to the capitol. It was taken from his pants' leg while he was asleep."

Well, friends, I think I have talked long enough. As I am in the business of shaking hands, I would say that I am enjoying excellent physical health, and if any of you wish to shake hands, I will be glad to do so.

Those present then congratulated the governor, and the assemblage dispersed.

How Shall Hayes be Treated?

New York Sun.

As if he was merely tolerated. He should be made to feel from the first day of his administration to the last that he is a fraudulent president, that he holds his office not by right but by trickery and fraud.

When a president is fairly elected and enters the white house, the opposition, no matter how bitterly they may have assailed him, grant him the respect due his high office, and the personal respect he deserves. He is not the president of his party, but of the whole people; and as such it has always been the custom to treat him Grant has forfeited the right to be so regarded, and he has proved to be a man of tastes so low and associates so mean and scandalous that gentleman may avoid his society; but he is our first president who has thus brought discredit on the office.

Hayes, however, will be no president at all. He will get the place only because the electoral votes of two states were stolen and the will of the people was thus defeated. He will take possession of the white house by a fraudulent lease, executed by the rascally Florida and Louisiana returning boards and sustained by the packed electoral commission.

Under such circumstances the people who believe in truth and honesty should let him severely alone, keep away from his inauguration, take no part in his receptions, decline invitations to his dinners, and always coldly regard him when he appears in public. There is a certain formal intercourse that senators and representatives must hold with the fraudulent president, but there should be no other. The protest against his occupancy should be quiet always, but unceasing.

It is a very serious matter, cheating the people of the United States, and forcing them to accept a president whom they have not elected. The president so inaugurated should be made to feel this fact and the rebellion of the people against such an unparalleled wrong and outrage. He should be made to feel it daily and hourly, that he is only tolerated, and is nothing more than a fraudulent president.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA CASE.

The report of the commission is in substance as follows:

The electoral commission having received certain certificates, and papers purporting to be certificates, and papers accompanying the same, of the electoral vote from the state of South Carolina, and objections thereto, reports that it has duly considered the same, and by a majority of votes decided, and does hereby decide, that the votes of C. C. Bowen, John Winsmith, Thomas B. Johnston, Timothy Hurley, W. B. Nash, Wm. Cook and Wm. F. Myers, named in the certificate of Gov. Chamberlain, which votes are certified by said persons, as appears by the certificate submitted to the commission, as aforesaid, and herewith returned, are the votes provided for by the constitution of the United States, and the same are lawfully to be counted as therein certified, namely, 7 votes for Rutherford B. Hayes, of the state of Ohio, for president, and 7 votes for William A. Wheeler, of the state of New York, for vice president. The commission, by a majority of votes, decides and reports that the seven persons first before named were duly appointed electors in and for the state of South Carolina.

The brief ground of this decision is that it appears upon such evidence as by the constitution and the law creating this commission is competent and pertinent to the consideration of the subject, that the before-mentioned electors appear to have been lawfully appointed such electors of president and vice-president of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1877, of the state of South Carolina, and that they voted as such at the time and in the manner provided for by the constitution of the United States and the law. And the commission has, by a majority of votes, decided that it is not competent, under the constitution and law, to go into evidence aliunde the papers opened by the president of the senate in the presence of the two houses, to prove that other persons than those regularly certified by the governor of the state and according to the determination of appointment by the returning officers for elections in said state, prior to the time required for the performance of their duties, had been appointed electors, or by counter proof to show that they had not, or that the determination of said returning officers was not in accordance with the truth and facts, the commission by a majority of votes being of the opinion that it is not within the jurisdiction of the two houses of congress, assembled to count the votes for president and vice-president, to enter upon the trial of such question.

Embezzlement and Suicide.

HARRISBURG, PA., February 26.—J. P. Hassler, ex-cashier of the Carlisle Deposit Bank, committed suicide to-day by hanging himself to a rafter in the garret of his residence at Carlisle. About four months ago, while cashier, an examination of the books showed him to be a defaulter to the amount of $11,000, he having drawn that sum from the bank to engage in stock speculations. He was unfortunate and lost it all.

HOW HASSLER FOUND BAIL.

About twelve o'clock to-day the sheriff of Cumberland county arrested him for embezzlement, and fixed his bail at $15,000, to procure which he gave him a few hours' time. At one o'clock his accustomed seat at the dinner table was empty. A search was made for him, and between three and four o'clock his oldest son discovered him hanging to a rafter by a clothes line, with which he had formed a noose. He was cold and stiff, and had evidently committed the deed soon after the sheriff had taken him into custody.

FOLLOWING A BAD EXAMPLE.

He suspended himself to the same rafter used by W. H. Beetem, cashier of the same bank about fourteen years ago, to hang himself. Beetem was a defaulter to the amount of above $15,000, which he also had drawn from the bank and lost in stock speculations, and his body was cut down by the man who committed suicide to-day, who was then an employe of the bank. Hassler had been a respectable citizen of Carlisle, and, shortly before he died, an elder in the German reformed church. His age was about fifty years, and an interesting family survive him.

Blue Glass for Eight.

From the New York Sun.

According to the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Times, Mr. Justice Miller did not approach his work in that strictly judicial frame of mind which might be deemed desirable. He said before he went to the commisson, "This Tilden party has no rights, and ought not to expect anything." There is something the matter with Mr. Justice Miller's "judicial unpartisanship." He ought to be put under blue glass along with Strong and Joe Bradley.

A CARD.

AS I see it announced in several exchanges that I am in editorial charge of "Boys and Girls of the South," and as there is much confusion in regard to the little paper I am about to issue and the one mentioned above, many persons confounding one with the other, I think it proper to state that I am in no way connected with "The Boys and Girls of the South," though it has my very best wishes for its future success. My own little paper will make its appearance on Thursday next. Bespeaking from a generous public a liberal patronage of both papers, I am, very respectfully, ANNIE M. BARNES.

—English Paper.

ROUNDABOUT IN GEORGIA.

—March comes in in the similitude of an exceedingly wet lion, and will probably go out shivering like a closely shaven lamb.

—Emory Seer says that as a candidate he is not independent of democratic principles. It is to be hoped, however, that he is independent of democratic votes.

—The statu quo between Jim Turnbull and Tinney Rucker was admirably maintained at last accounts.

—Engenious Speeer remarks that THE CONSTITUTION is opposed to a primary election in the ninth. And why not? Is Engenious in favor of eating his breakfast after dinner.

—The Count Johannes B. G writes a glowing account of his recent trip to Savannah. He makes no mention, however, of the box of oranges he promised us three years ago. We have come to look upon the count as one of the gayest old flirts known to the newspaper business.

—The duty of democrats in the ninth district is to vote for Bell.

—We leave it to the Griffin News if independents and disorganizers should not be put down wherever found.

—We take pleasure in announcing that our friends of the Macon Telegraph are at last willing to stare facts in the face. That able journal remarks: "We note that the Atlanta CONSTITUTION says the public must look to that paper and not to the Telegraph for news. The public needs no volunteer information on that subject. It understands the situation."

—The wheat crop in Douglass county is reported to be in a flourishing condition. Oats are not as promising as last year.

—A colored man in Savannah deliberately murdered his brother the other night by stabbing him in the neck with a penknife. The fratracide is in jail, the coroner's jury having found a verdict of willful murder.

—J. D. Roddey, the party who was ordered to leave Crawford county by a meeting of citizens, is out in a card in which he denounces the aforesaid citizens for casting suspicions on the character of a virtuous young lady.

—The editor of the Griffin News, glancing anxiously at the face of his new gold chonometer, guesses that THE CONSTITUTION is afraid of the result of a primary election in the Ninth district. Col. Speer ought not to forget to remember that an orthodox time-piece is not exactly the thing to guess by.

—Douglass county steps forward with the latest phenomen Mr. William Batchelor thirteen years ago swallowed a cockle-burr, and coughed it up the other day. The burr was as sound as if it had been preserved in alchohol.

—We would like to know whether Emory Speer is running for congress, or whether he is simply endeavoring to "reform" the party.

—The editor of the Fort Valley Mirror is endeavoring to impress upon the minds of the wayward husbandmen that spring is about to put in an appearance. If it is as wet in Houston county as it is up here, the genial agriculturists will discover for themselves that several springs have sprung a leak.

—Dr. Deems of New York, will shortly deliver two lectures in Augusta, one entitled "Before Marriage" and the other "After Marriage."

—It is understood that as soon as the circus excitement quiets down in Augusta, the city editor of the Constitutionalist will marry a widow.

—When the bones of a man begin to ache to hold office he at once advertises the disease as "reform." There are some funny things in this country.

—The editor of the Warrenton Clipper, who recently represented the state-at-large in the legislature, has returned to his turnip patch.

—The Georgia editors are fretting over the recent card of Mr. Hugh Haralson as though they thought he wrote it with the deliberate intention of puzzling the fraternity.

—The indications seem to be that Mr. Speer will have company in his independent canvass.

—The Griffin News remarks "that roistering blade Colonel Bates, is still buccaneering for gold over in Douglas county. We warn the colonel now not to infringe on Coweta or the adjoining territory, or his punishment will be fearful—in fact terrific."

—Those colored cattle thieves have been arrested and committed to jail by Magistrate Abrams, of Savannah.

—The Gwinnett county jail is clear of prisoners.

—It is stated that a Gwinnett county man burned his own dwelling and outhouses last week.

—The mumps are playing an engagement in Thomasville.

—The truth always comes out sooner or later. The reason the Griffin News is such a red-hot little paper is because the editors take radishes in payment of subscriptions —Early corn and Irish potatoes were nipped in the bud in Thomas county by the recent freeze.

—Mr. Richard Smith, of Jasper county, has been tried in Walton county superior court for the killing of Hardin and acquitted.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY

FARMERS who wish to solve the Guano problem cannot do better than to try the following:

Take Etiwan Dissolved Bone	600 lbs.
Cotton Seed Green	50 bushels.
Stable Manure	6 barrels

Moisten the cotton seed well, and compost in alternate layers Let stand three weeks to a month, or until wanted for use, under shelter. If you have no cotton seed put in three times the quantity Stable Manure. Use the whole on eight acres for cotton and ten acres for corn We should like to see every farmer in the state try this even in a small way The cotton seed and stable manure furnish the ammonia, and the bone furnishes the plant food, which two elements are all that you want in a fertilizer. We have books and formulæ for distribution Address

Honorable Graduation.

Among the graduates of the medical college last night was Dr Daniel Hook Howell, son of Mr. Clark Howell of this county.

This young gentleman, after attending the college for two terms, received a diploma and will soon enter upon the regular practice of medicine. During his course he applied himself most faithfully to his studies and won the respect and esteem of both faculty and students His success is particularly honorable to him since he suffers from a lameness that has afflicted him since he was nine years old. He enters a noble profession with a good elementary knowledge of its science, and with an ambition to succeed in its practice.

Atlanta Turn Verein.

The Atlanta Turn Verein celebrated their fourth anniversary last night at their hall. Despite the incessant and heavy fall of rain, we were gratified to see a large attendance. The exercises were plays, dancing and supper. The first play was well enacted. "Love Superior to Law" was the play. Mr. B. Franse as Baron Ernst Von Hallbach; Miss Wm. as Louise, and Paul Rauschenberg as waiter, filled their roles well. The baron, a rich landed proprietor while en route to the capitol to attend a law suit, was detained at a railroad station where he meets a beautiful young lady. They get into conversation and the baron falls in love with her. The lawyers had told him that the lady who was suing him was a crabbed old maid, but they discovered that they were the plaintiff and defendant to the suit. She vows never to speak to him, but nevertheless was impressed by him.

She wouldn't speak, but at the piano plays "Thou hast the prettiest eyes," which has a telling effect on the baron. He rushes to the piano and plays the second verse. Finally he gets on his knees to her and sues for her hand, and the play winds up with the marriage of the parties and the triumph of love over law.

The next was the "Happy Honeymoon," or the struggle for the wearing of the male garments.

Max Stahl as Mauntz, Miss Julia Rauschenberg as Emma and Miss Amanda Rauschenberg as the servant maid filled their respective roles with consummate ability. Mauntz was the patient, firm and triumphant husband. Emma was the passionate, ambitious and loving wife who failing to conquer "accepted the situation" and rose superior to it. The servant maid threw more intellectuality than common into her part. The "Emma" of Miss Julia Rauschenberg, was as perfect and natural as if she were really enacting it.

The performance was highly creditable.

The supper was served up in fine style, and dancing was kept up to a late hour.

THE HEALING ART.

COMMENCEMENT AT THE ATLANTA MEDICAL COLLEGE.

Twenty Two Graduates of a Flourishing Institution—Pleasant Incidents Last Evening.

The Atlanta Medical college is twenty-two years old. It was chartered early in 1854 and at that time was considered an experiment, the success of which was problematical. There were older colleges in other cities of the state, and an institution started in a young town, then quite small compared to its present dimensions, was looked upon with distrust by many good sober people who treated that effort as they have many a subsequent attempt of our energetic, rushing city, by characterizing it as a rash endeavor and a burly beginning that was doomed to end in gloomy failure.

The Atlanta Medical College falsified these predictions from the start. The first term opened in 1855, without about thirty students who assembled to hear lectures

IN THE CITY HALL.

The corner stone of the present college building was laid with impressive ceremonies during that year, though it was not finished until early in 1857. The first faculty of the institution consisted of a number of able and skilled physicians, some of whom are still in the chairs they then filled. The following was the original faculty:

Dr J W Jones, Professor of Practice.
Dr H W Brown, Professor of Chemistry.
Dr A H Buchanan, Professor of Anatomy.
Dr J G Westmoreland, Professor of Materia Medica.
Dr W F Westmoreland, Professor of Surgery.
Dr J P Logan, Professor of Physiology.
Dr Jesse Boring, Professor of Obstetrics.
Dr Shirley Bragg, Professor of Minor Surgery.

The attendance constantly increased under the care of this faculty, and the fame of the college spread throughout this and adjoining states.

Two terms were passed in the city hall and then, the new building being completed, was occupied, and since that time has been in constant use.

The attendance of students increased so rapidly that at the term of 1860-61 there were at least one hundred and fifty young men attended lectures and at the ensuing commencement no less than sixty graduated The college was shortly after this time compelled to suspend on account of the troubled condition of the country. During the years 1861, '62, '63 and '64 no sessions were had. Nearly all the young graduates either as surgeons or as regular soldiers. During the terrible days of 1864, when the confederate army was around Atlanta, the college was used as a hospital and was the means of great good and valuable assistance to the government

ENTERED THE ARMY

In the winter of 1865 the doors were once more thrown open and though the people were in poverty and distress large numbers of young men repaired here to pursue the study of their chosen profession. Since the war the history of the college is a tale of success. The faculty has been composed of able and distinguished physicians. Georgia and neighboring southern states have liberally patronized the institution. Last year there were twenty-seven regular graduates and seventeen graduates in the school of pharmacy. The grand total of graduates since the foundation of the college, including the young men who received their diplomas last night posts up five hundred and eighty-five authorized doctors, making an average of about thirty-three for every year the college has been in operation. Very few similar institutions in the south or in the union, certainly none that ever existed in Georgia, can make such a fine display of statistics.

THE PAST TERM

was one eminently successful. The faculty adopted a strict rule requiring all tuition to be paid in cash, and it was found that this would greatly diminish the attendance. In spite of this there were seventy matriculates, among them some young men of brilliant talents and fine promise

The success of the lectures has been noticeable, and the application and general deportment of the students most encouraging to the faculty. At present the following gentlemen constitute the regular faculty:

J G Westmoreland, M D, professor of materia medica and therapeutics.

W F Westmoreland, M D, professor of the principles and practice of surgery.

Wm Abram Love, M D, professor of physiology.

V H Taliaferro, M D, professor of obstetrics and diseases of women and children.

Jno Thad Johnson, M D, professor of general and descriptive anatomy; lecturer on venereal diseases.

A W Calhoun, M D, professor of diseases of the eye and ear, and clinical ophthalmology and otology.

J H Logan, A M, M D, professor of general and medical chemistry.

John T Banks, M D, professor of principles and practice of medicine.

C W Nutting, M D, Demonstrator of anatomy.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

A more unfavorable night for the annual commencement exercises of the college could scarcely have happened. Last evening it rained, blew and stormed, and all things seemed most unpropitious for a public gathering. In spite of these circumstances, however, a goodly number of ladies and gentlemen assembled at DeGive's opera house to witness the commencement exercises. They were opened with an impressive prayer by Rev. J. H. Martin, after which Prof J. T. Johnston, dean of the faculty, stated that the term just closed had been one singularly pleasant, and it afforded him gratification to present for diplomas twenty two young gentlemen, who had completed the course as required by law and passed all the requisite examinations These young men came from the states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and Missouri.

The following is a list of the graduates: C D Findlay, J G Martin, Wm Edgar Adams, J L Weaver, R A Cook, J P Statham, A F Spears, J H Smith C W Brown, G T Walker, L C Greer, W L Bulward, D C Ticknor, D H Howell, J T Jackson, Micajah Haynes C F Perry, Chas Boyd, J W Williams, W F Goldin, J S Ansley, H M Smith

As they were called forward their diplomas were presented in "due and ancient form" by Col. W. L. Mitchell, one of the trustees of the college.

The programme was interspersed with music furnished by Ford's string band.

THE PRIZES

Professor Johnson announced that Gen. W. S. Walker had been selected to deliver the prizes The faculty offer a case of surgical instruments to the student who, at the examination of his degree, has attained the highest general proficiency in his studies.

Professor Calhoun offers a prize of an opthalmoscope to the student who presents the best thesis upon any subject connected with the eye or ear.

General Walker, before delivering the prizes, made a few chaste and appropriate remarks upon the occasion and the associations it awakened. He paid a high tribute to Dr McClellan, of the United States army, now stationed here as general surgeon of the army in the south, who, in his kind treatment of all, friends and foes, who, during the war, fell under his charge, won the lasting affection of many of his fellow-creatures.

He urged the young men of the class—those who gained the prize and those who failed—to go on to higher attainments and make life a continued march from great to greater success

It was then announced that Dr J. W. Williams of Missouri had been awarded both the prizes.

The young man has had a remarkably brilliant course in the college, having greatly distinguished himself by close application to his studies, and an admirable thoroughness in them all. He has before him a rich harvest that is to be reaped by manly effort and devotion to his high calling.

The instruments presented to him last night will be a lasting testimonial of his successful college career, as well as a pleasant reminder of the days when life's fairest romance and its most exhilirating ambition unite to lift the young into a purer realm than that in which the troubled days of after life.

THE VALEDICTORY.

The valedictory to the class, the faculty and trustees is always the sad feature in otherwise festive commencement occasions.

It was announced that the class had chosen Dr. J. W. Williams, of Missouri, as their valedictorian.

The young orator appeared and acquitted himself admirably in a well conceived, smoothly written speech, which he delivered with earnestness to his classmates, the faculty, trustee and audience. His general theme was the advancement of the world in all departments of science and art and the necessity which these improvements placed upon each young man to strive for a higher attainment in whatever he might attempt. He made a plea for the purity of the profession which he and his classmates would soon be expected to illustrate. The high duties and noble possibilities of a true physician were portrayed and an appeal made to each of the young physicians to reach for the life that brings these blessings with it. The parting words were spoken and the class of 1877 passed out into the busy walks of life where they will be expected to be worthy of their profession and the training they have received.

THE RESPONSE.

On behalf of the faculty Professor William A Love appeared to respond to the valedictory spoken by Dr Williams.

He congratulated the young men upon their enviable position. They are just entering a profession which has ever been remarkable, but in which, in the past few years, wonderful improvements have been made Here the law is ceaseless progress, and he who wishes for success must move with the onward current. Of late years the cunning and skill of man have invented instruments which greatly aid the progress of medicine and aided its usefulness. During the past thirty-three years, medicine has gone forward by giant strides and has extended her domain far beyond its ancient limits. Even in the memory of the speaker wonderful progress had been made. He had known in his own experience the origin of many of the improvements which are now at the command of the skilled peysician. This onward march has not ceased. The men of the future must carry it on. Upon their endeavors will rest the completion of the work which has thus far been brought so well.

The increased facilities of the profession afford a broader field for a physician's usefulness and increase his already heavy responsibility. The young physician must study to prepare himself for almost any possible emergency. To this end he should be untiring in his labors, ceaseless in his researches and insatiable in his acquirement. There can be no more fatal mistake than to suppose that the labors of the profession were past, and its rewards were now to come. The true field is but reached and the grand life work but begun.

There is a true moral heroism in a faithful performance of the duties of a physician Through dangers, hardships, toils without number; he is called to go, and if he falter not, he rises a hero above the difficulties that surround him. He is subjected to temptations which it will require all of an austere manhood to withstand. In the profession are humbugs and quacks who bring upon it the stictures of popular criticism. This opprobrium must be lifted by the exemplary life and noble services of the true physician as he fulfills all the requirements of his high calling. The physician must guard with zealous care his private and professional reputation, and to show to the world a character pure and spotless.

A PLEASANT INCIDENT.

After Dr. Love concluded his remarks, he announced that he had a most pleasant duty to perform in presenting to Professor Charles W. Nutting a gold-headed cane, by which his friends and the students who enjoyed his instructions meant to express the high regard they felt for their young and talented demonstrator of anatomy.

Mr. Nutting responded in a brief speech of thanks.

The benediction was then pronounced, and the audience dispersed highly pleased.

THE FLOWING BOWL

After the exercises, Professor Nutting invited his classmates to his room, where they were sumptuously feted. All present enjoyed the pleasures of the social board and flowing bowl and united in wishing long life and happiness to the talented young demonstrator.

A BONANZA OF BRAINS

THE RISE AND SUCCESS OF THE NEW YORK LEDGER.

A Look Into the Business of the Greatest Story Paper of the World—How It Is Managed.

Special Correspondence of the Constitution.

NEW YORK, February 26, 1877.

Bonner's Ledger has achieved a success in literary journalism equal to, if not surpassing, that which the Herald has achieved as a newspaper. It is said that this story paper pays a net profit a year.

OF OVER A QUARTER OF MILLION DOLLARS

Bonner bought the Ledger purely by chance. He did not set a shining mark and fly to it. He made a hap-hazard bargain, and had the nerve and ability to make a miracle out of it.

He was the proprietor of a small printing office, and had the job of printing the Ledger, which was then a purely mercantile paper, being called "The Mercantile Ledger." It was struggling along miserably, and its proprietor determined to stop it, purely to avoid

LOSING THE JOB OF PRINTING IT

Bonner bought it.

He soon began to drop the market reports with which it had been filled, and substituted stories and light reading therefor. The circulation picking up a little, the acute proprietor engaged Mrs. Harriett Sigourney to write for it. Being encouraged by the venture he engaged Fanny Fern, then in the height of her fame, making that famous contract in which he paid her for a story. This fact, properly advertised, both by Bonner and by the general press, brought hundreds of new subscribers to the Ledger.

The first real success, however, was achieved in the publication of Sylvanus Cobb's first story, "The Gun-maker of Moscow." This story, before it was half finished, had added 25,000 subscribers to the paper. The success of the Ledger was then assured. With a full exchequer, and a famous paper, Mr. Bonner began to prepare himself for the millions that awaited him.

After deliberation he made up his mind that the secret of success was "to advertise his paper." So to advertising he went; executing several feats in this line that had never been equaled, and that seemed foolhardy, if not literally insane. He spent money by the

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS IN ADVERTISING.

He sent brigades of painters into every state in the union to put the legends of the Ledger on every fence, rock and tree. He sent out tons of circulars, posters and pamphlets, but his main reliance was on newspapers. He bought squares, columns, and even full pages by the hundreds. He paid $2,000 for a single one day's advertisement in the New York Herald.

Appreciating the success of the "Gun-Maker of Moscow," he made the beginning of a new story a great era. He would take the first chapter of a new story, always chock full of sensation, and closing with a lonely heroine hanging by her eyelids over a precipice, and print it in one thousand newspapers all over the country, biting it off abruptly with the following statement: "The balance of this thrilling story will be found in the New York Ledger."

$25,000 TO $50,000 WOULD BE SPENT on advertising a single story, which would open with an addition of that many subscribers, and three times that much money in the enterprising publisher's drawer. The first chapter of one of these stories was published a few years ago in thirteen Georgia newspapers, at a cost of $980, the orders having come through Pettingill's advertising agency. I suppose that investment carried $5,000 out of Georgia to repay Bonner.

Beecher's great story of "Norwood" drank up $60,000 in advertising before a line of it had appeared. Of the paper containing the first chapter being the largest issue ever made by any American newspaper. The story, however, did not hold the readers that had been drawn to it, and was a comparatively unsuccessful venture. A leading advertising agent, who had himself received several $50,000 contracts from Mr. Bonner, told me that Bonner could not have spent less than $150,000 to $200,000 a year in the years running from '58 to '70. He has curtailed this expense very considerably now, as the Ledger's circulation is about as large as can be handled.

470,000 COPIES WERE SOLD,

ADVERTISING BY A STOUT METHOD.

Mr. Bonner has done a great deal of advertising in an indirect way. His purchase of Dexter, the fastest horse in the world, put his name in a million mouths, and made the enormous wealth of his paper a universal theme. His withdrawal of Dexter from the turf, and using him as a simple road horse, increased this wonder. Bonner followed this stroke by buying, at fabulous prices, any young horse of startling promise, and soon had a stable worth $150,000. His reason for buying Dexter was characteristic. "I wanted to beat Vanderbilt," he said. A new excitement is now created over Bonner's stable by the statement that he is determined to breed therefrom a horse that will beat a mile in 2 10.

A lucky hit made by Mr. Bonner in an advertising way, was the payment of $1,000 an article for ten short articles, from Mr. Edward Everett, the most cultured scholar in America, the proceeds to go to the purchase of Mt. Vernon, where Washington is buried. Another venture that created a great sensation was the publication in one issue of the Ledger of articles from Bennett, Raymond and Greeley—the three great lions of the American press. The publication proved a perfect bonanza, the unlearned, awkward chapters on the boyhood of the foremost man of the republic being read literally everywhere, and making the sensation regnant of journalism for the time. Greeley's autobiography made a hit also.

Bonner's lavish pay, and the chasteness and purity which he has preserved in his paper, have given him control of the best writers of America. Parton, Saxe, Dickens, Hawthorne, Emerson and scores of others have contributed to his columns. At one time he engaged the twelve leading clergymen of the country to write twelve stories. Following this came twelve articles from the presidents of twelve leading colleges.

THE MAIN STRENGTH OF THE LEDGER

is in its regular story-writers. These bring the subscribers, and hold them. Their wonderful serials—close of plot, vehement in action, graphic in diction, simple, direct, terrible—have an irresistible attraction for the quick-thoughted, rough-cultured masses. They are grand revelations to these people, who would do without bread that they might buy the Ledger. Their little world is peopled with the knights and ladies, and villains, and heroes, and dwarfs, and magicians, and scouts, that do part in the famous serials. Between the issues of the paper, they discuss the probable determination of some struggle cruelly left at its crisis in the last issue. The appearance of a new story by a female writer is a great event with them.

THE CORPS OF LEDGER STORY WRITERS

is not large. Sylvanus Cobb is the veteran—then comes Mrs. Southworth, Professor Wm. Henry Peck, Mrs. Duprey, and Harriet and Leon Lewis. This is about the regular force employed. The last copy of the Ledger, now before us, has serials from each of these writers except Cobb and Mrs. Lewis, Professor Peck holding the first page (the post of honor) with a new and powerful story called "Rudolph or the Red Dwart."

These writers furnish two or three stories a year as their contract may be, which gives the Ledger about fifteen serials a year. These are supplemented with short stories, with the specialty articles and topical essays. It is a notable fact that each one of these writers belong to the old Ledger corps. Mr. Bonner never takes a writer until he is certain that he is just what he wants—and then he never loses him. Another feature is, that they write for no paper but the Ledger. They are paid such salaries as will bring them exclusive work. As story writers, they are the very best—in their specialties no one approaches them.

THE PAY OF THE LEDGER WRITERS.

It is notorious that Bonner outpays all other publishers. He lavishes money on his writers just as he does on his advertisements and his horses. He paid Beecher $20,000 for the story of "Norwood." Jesse Grant got $12,000 for his botchy sketches Fanny Fern was paid $75 a week for an article hardly half a column long. Dickens was paid $5,000 for a story of a column or two. His regular corps of story writers are paid $10,000 a year, and their contracts run from six to ten years. There are six of these writers, Sylvanus Cobb being the most prolific, and receiving probably a larger salary than the others.

None of the stories written by these authors are published in book-form. They are the property of Bonner, who keeps electrotypes of them, and finds continued sale for them. A new reader of the Ledger, being struck with a certain serial, will send for other stories by the same author. Cobb's "Gunmaker of Moscow," Southworth's "Hidden Hand," Peck's "Execution of Venice" have constant sale now, though they were published years ago.

THE PROFITS OF THE LEDGER.

It is comparatively easy to approximate the profits of publishing the Ledger. The circulation every week is not less than 380,000 copies. The American News company alone take from 320,000 to 350,000 copies a week. This fact I have from first hands. Of this number 40,000 copies go to Boston, 25,000 to Philadelphia, and 12,000 to Baltimore. About 40,000 copies go to the south, about 450 going to Atlanta. Hudson in his "History of Journalism" puts the Ledger circulation at 400,000 copies.

Of the 380,000 that we calculate it circulates, 50,000 are mail subscribers and 330,000 are sold to the American News company. This company pays 4 cents a copy, or $13,200 a week, or $686,400 a year. The mail subscibers pay $3 and $2.50 a year—let us say $2.50 Fifty thousand copies would bring $125,000. Add this to receipts from the News company, and we have $811,400 as the total receipts of the Ledger. To show that this is not an over-estimate, I refer to a published statement of the sworn returns from circulation of all New York papers for the year of '69. The Ledger received that year $699,824 being next to the Herald on the list—running $200,000 above the receipts of the daily and weekly Tribune. I have made the receipts now only $111,000 greater than they were then, and the circulation is much greater.

THE EXPENSES OF THIS ISSUE

may be summed up as follows: Printing paper (1½ cent a sheet for 380,000 sheets) $5,700 a week, or $288,640 a year; advertising $50 000 a year; pay to corps of six story writers $65,000; to other writers $60,000; office expenses $50 000; engraving $20,000; incidental $50,000. Let's tabulate:

MR. BONNER ATTENDS STRICTLY

to the management of the paper himself, being an indefatigable writer. He writes many of the short, snappy editorials and plans all the bold strokes by which he keeps the fame of the paper up. He is a quiet, quick-motioned man, curt but polite and apparently not a high liver. His brother assists him in the management of the paper. The Ledger has a house like a palace, being one of the finest buildings in the city. No advertisements are ever inserted in the Ledger. A fortune could not buy space for a single line.

In my next I shall give you a few points about some other phenomenal papers. H. W. G.
